INTRODUCTION

This cumulative, five year index to volumes 16 through 20 (1970-74) of Historical Abstracts is in two parts. Part A indexes the 18,827 abstracts published in Historical Abstracts volume 16 and Historical Abstracts, Part A, Modern History Abstracts volumes 17-20. Part B of this index provides access to the 12,802 abstracts published in Historical Abstracts, Part B, Twentieth Century Abstracts volumes 17-20. The five volumes of Historical Abstracts were entirely reindexed using the American Bibliographical Center's Subject Profile Index (ABC-SPIndex).

SPINDEX

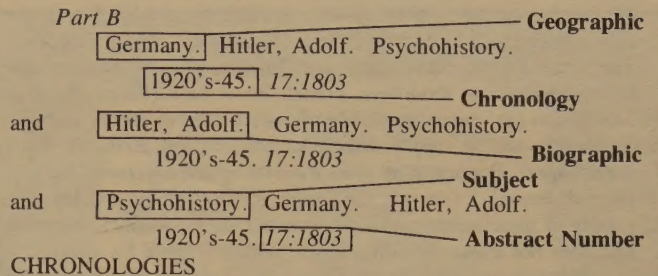

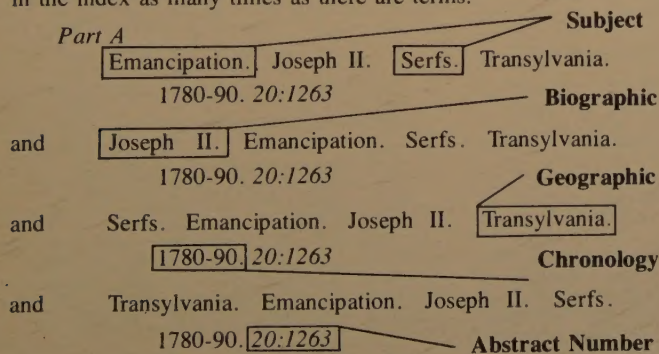

SPIndex is a computer-assisted but humanly controlled indexing system developed at the Center in 1974. It was applied to America: History and Life beginning in 1974 and to Historical Abstracts beginning with Volume 21 (1975). Because SPIndex was received enthusiastically by the users of these abstracting services, the editors have used it to produce this completely new index to the five volumes of Historical Abstracts.

SPIndex is a reliable, specific basis for selection of relevant material at an early point in the search process. This index allows the searcher to use his time more efficiently by eliminating irrelevant citations without having to check the articles or even the abstracts. The subject profile, composed of several subject, biographical, geographical, and chronological descriptors, provides fuller and more specific information about each article than does a traditional hierarchical index or an index based on title words alone.

The SPIndex combination of human and computer skills begins with indexers who select the most specific index terms from any of the following: 1) key words or key phrases from titles and texts of the abstracts, 2) words from a preferred subject heading list developed by editors at the American Bibliographical Center, and 3) independent, free language terms when they are more suitable than key words or subject headings. The printed index makes no distinctions among these three types of index terms.

SUBJECT PROFILE

SPIndex provides a subject profile of each article by listing together all its index terms, terms drawn from one or more of the three sources. The subject profile, or string of index terms, is rotated by computer processing so that the complete subject profile of the article appears under each of the individual terms and appears in the index as many times as there are terms:

CHRONOLOGIES

Each index profile also includes a chronological descriptor dating the events of the article indexed, an innovative feature in the indexing of the periodical literature of history. If an article concerns two discrete periods, two chronological descriptors are given.

SPECIFICITY

SPIndex aims at indexing each abstract as specifically as possible. It deliberately avoids the attempt to draw together all articles on broad, general topics such as economic history or intellectual history. Only articles actually about economic history in general are indexed by the term "Economic History." The searcher interested in a topic so general must decide on the specific terms that fall under that general category. For example, for economic history one would look under the general heading "Economic History" but also under specific terms such as industrialization, stocks, banks, investments, foreign investments, inflation, mercantilism, and multinational corporations. Although SPIndex's specific approach to the body of historical literature does not conveniently gather all material on a general topic like economic history, it has proven useful to most searchers. It gives a succinct statement of the subject and chronology of the article, provides access to the most specific topics, and does not overwhelm the user with a large number of undifferentiated references at any one term.

There are some exceptions to the principle of indexing as specifically as possible. When an abstract contains several personal names, and particularly if the named persons are not central to the article, they are indexed as a group. For example, an abstract citing five historians is indexed under "Historians," whereas an abstract focusing on one, two, or three historians is indexed by their specific names. Similarly, an abstract containing the names of six industries is indexed under "Industry." If an article is on the periphery of historical study and the most specific index term would be so specialized or technical as to be practically useless to the majority of historians, a more general term is used for indexing purposes. For example, "Methodology (factor analysis)" is used rather than "Factor Analysis," and "Economic Theory (relative deprivation)" rather than "Relative Deprivation."

This policy of using more general terms for material outside the usual confines of history is reflected in the choice of direct or inverted order for multi-word index terms. Librarianship, for example, is a peripheral, not a central discipline covered in Historical Abstracts; therefore libraries are indexed under "Libraries" as the leading term, modified by the type if appropriate: "Libraries, academic."

As a rule, SPIIndex does not index both the specific and the general, but in a few cases such redundancy is allowed. For example, an abstract on an Indian tribe is indexed by the specific tribal name, such as Araucanians, and by a term beginning with the word Indian or Indians. Similarly, an individual railroad is indexed under its specific proper name and under the general term, "Railroads"; and a movement with the name of a country in the title is indexed under both the title and the country, for example, "Young Italy" and "Italy."

INDEXING CONVENTIONS

SPIIndex does not indicate the relationships between any two terms in the index string, but some relationships are shown through modification of leading terms. Key words and subject headings are qualified by modifiers in parentheses or by inversion of words in a phrase. In particular, cities or other smaller geographical units are subordinated to the country: France (Normandy), Spain (Madrid). The terms French Revolution and Russian Revolution may also have geographical modifiers: French Revolution (Paris), Russian Revolution (St. Petersburg). Modifiers are used to clarify ambiguous words and to supply additional information: Echo du Nord (newspaper); Popper, Karl (The Poverty of Historicism); Strikes, general; Bismarck (vessel); De Felice, Renzo (review article). The variety of punctuation and capitalization has no intrinsic meaning and does not affect the filing order, which is word by word.

Index terms within the profile are listed alphabetically after the leading term. The user is cautioned not to rely on finding all identical terms sorted together at the second position in the index string. For example, note the positions of "Communism" and "Political Theory" in profiles beginning with "Lenin, V.I.":

- Lenin, V. I. Antipolitik. Communism. Mao Tse-tung. Political Theory. 19c-20c. 17:1262
- Class struggle. Ideology. Leftism. Political Theory. 1919-20. 18:224
- Communism. Patriotism. Political Theory. 20c. 17:231
- Political Theory. Self-Determination. 1900-24. 17:2252
- Political Theory. Social Theory. Ukraine. USSR. 1936. 1971. 20:1070

The searcher must peruse the entire list of profiles under the leading term to make certain he finds all profiles in which the second term also appears.

CROSS REFERENCES

SPIIndex includes cross references in the form of see and see also notes. See also references are used between synonyms or related terms. They also often lead the user from general to more specific terms, but not the reverse. Thus the entry "Labor" refers to "Agricultural Labor," but the latter does not carry a reference to the general term, "Labor." Cross references indicate some of the instances of material indexed by variant forms of the word (e.g., "Army" is separated from "Armies" by a number of index terms), but one should, as a matter of course, search under all forms of a word, for example: age, aged, aging; cities, city.

The SPIIndex string itself forms an informal cross reference system by alerting the reader to other relevant terms in the index. For example, the index string

- Agricultural Labor. Brazil. Droughts. Economic Conditions. Migration, Internal. 1971. 19:1762

directs one to additional entries under "Migration, Internal" and "Migration, Internal" leads to related terms like "Land Tenure."

AUTHOR INDEX

A separate author index follows the subject index. Authors' names are listed in the most complete form used on the article or articles. If the same author has used more than one form of name, one form is listed in the index. Occasionally, however, it is not possible to establish whether two similar names are the same person, so both (or more) are given with their respective abstract numbers.

LIST OF PERIODICALS

The list of periodicals gives the titles of all journals and festschriften surveyed for Historical Abstracts, volumes 16-20.

THE INDEXING PROJECT

This two-volume Historical Abstract Five Year Index is the largest index produced to date using SPIIndex and the largest single indexing project undertaken by the American Bibliographical Center. The initial step in the process, after planning the project and training indexers, was the writing, reviewing, keyboarding, proofing, and correcting of the new indexing for each abstract. Next a listing of all the words used as index terms (a "leading term" list) was edited for consistency with established indexing policies, for internal consistency, and for correction of machine-generated errors; corrections were made to the file. At the same time, the leading term list was compared with a master list of cross references and the appropriate ones tagged for inclusion in the index. The third major step was the listing of the index in its fully-rotated format and editing that listing to resolve the remaining computer-related problems and to achieve greater accuracy and consistency in index terms. Cross references were also further checked and revised at this point. These final corrections were made to the magnetic tape file from which photocomposed camera-ready pages were produced.

Charles W. Olson, managing editor of Historical Abstracts Part A, served as project director. He supervised the indexing and managed the editorial aspects of the production of the index. Roger W. Davis, managing editor of Historical Abstracts Part B, and assistant editors Jessica S. Brown, Frances A. Radovich, Jeffrey B. Reed, and Walter J. Reedy checked index entries and provided continuous editorial support. The team of temporary editorial assistants who reindexed the 31,629 abstracts comprised Jon C. Billigmeier, Randi Glick, John Perez, Elizabeth Schoofs, and Terry Simmerman.

The Data Processing Services department of ABC-Clio, Inc., directed by Kenneth H. Baser, keyboarded, corrected, and processed the index entries. Programmer Douglas Hsu and computer operator Cathy Clements designed and operated the computer system; production supervisor John Kendig managed the keyboarding, proofreading, and correction activities.

The staff of the American Bibliographical Center encourages comments and suggestions for the improvement of ABC-SPIIndex in order that it may continue to serve the needs of the users of Historical Abstracts.

USER'S GUIDE

HISTORICAL ABSTRACTS FIVE YEAR INDEX (Vols. 16-20) contains a Subject Profile Index (SPIndex) and an author index. In the subject index each entry provides a profile of an article, consisting of an average of 3.6 subject, geographic, and biographic descriptors, followed by the chronology of the article. The descriptors are rotated so that the complete profile is cited under each index term in alphabetical order.

The abstract number is given in italics after the profile. It indicates the volume number first, followed by the individual citation number.

The abstract number is given in italics after the profile. It indicates the volume number first, followed by the individual citation number. The abstract numbers in this index volume refer to HISTORICAL ABSTRACTS, Part A, MODERN HISTORY ABSTRACTS, vols. 16-20.

A dash replaces second and subsequent identical leading terms. Cross references in the form of See and See also references are provided.

The separate author index lists the names of authors and abstract numbers.

For further explanation of SPIndex, see the Introduction.

SUBJECT INDEX

Subject Profile Index (SPIndex) carries both generic and specific index terms. Begin a search at the general term but also look under more specific or related terms. Cross-references appear in the index.

Each string of index descriptors is intended to present a profile of a given article; however, no particular relationship between any two terms in the profile is implied. Terms within the profile are listed alphabetically after the leading term. The variety of punctuation and capitalization reflects production methods and has no intrinsic meaning; e.g., there is no difference in meaning between "History, study of" and "History (study of)."

Cities, towns, counties, and other small geographical subdivisions are normally listed in parentheses following their respective countries, e.g., "France (Paris)." However, formerly independent geographical subdivisions, e.g., Bohemia or Prussia, do appear as leading terms, listed alphabetically in the index.

Terms beginning with an arabic numeral are listed after the letter Z. Chronology of a particular article appears at the end of the string of index descriptors. In the chronological descriptor, "c" stands for century, e.g., "19c" means "19th century."

All reference numbers are to abstracts in Historical Abstracts vol. 16 and Historical Abstracts, Part A, Modern History Abstracts vols. 17-20.
